

This case is ridiculous to me. Currently people are allowed to record programs off tv with no detriment to the movie and television industry. Why would this change because the signal is digital? The answer is that it wouldn't. Ethical choices about recording are based on morality, NOT the quality of the signal. Just because the signal is digital and/or high definition is no reason to restrict peoples' ability to record programs off television.